

Where will your mood take you?

Late January is when many people start turning “someday” into real plans. In the US, 27th of January is even marked as a day dedicated to planning your next vacation — and we love that idea. It’s a perfect reminder that the best trips start with a little intention and a good plan. With that in mind, today we’re sharing three very different early spring escapes: Agadir in Morocco, Sicily in Italy, and the Forest of Dean in the UK. So you can choose the destination that fits your mood, your pace, and the kind of holiday you need most. Wherever you choose to go, you can feel reassured knowing that all three destinations have Diaverum clinics, accepting holiday dialysis patients.

Agadir, Morocco

A laid-back beach city on the Atlantic coast, ideal for an early spring escape. Expect soft light, fresh ocean air and wide promenades that make it easy to stay active at a comfortable pace. With its relaxed rhythm, Agadir suits patients who want warmth without intense heat and a holiday built around rest, simple pleasures and easy outings.

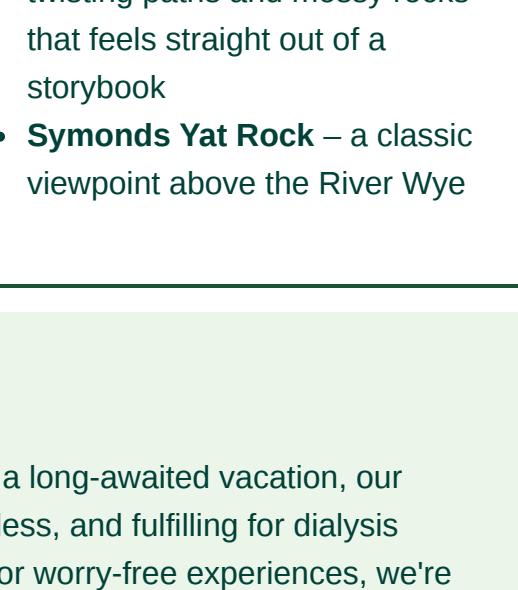

Your perfect day in Agadir:

- Seafront promenade – long, easy walks with ocean views
- Souk El Had – colours, spices and local crafts (perfect for a short outing)
- Sunset by the beach – the simplest plan is often the best one

d.HOLIDAY Spotlight Sicily

Sicily has a special kind of early spring magic. As the season begins to shift, the island feels calmer, more intimate, and the first signs of spring bring a fresh energy to everyday moments. It's a wonderful time to experience. For many patients, that's exactly what makes Sicily such a rewarding off-season destination: you can explore at your own rhythm, savour the local culture, and still return to calm, restorative moments between your plans.
